

2 BURNED IN SAVING DOLL FROM FLAMES

Gasoline Explosion at Brooklyn Church Block Party Sets Fire to Toy.

DANCERS ARE STAMPEDED

Woman's Clothing Ignited When She Attempts to Rescue Plaything.

A block party for the benefit of the parochial school of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Lourdes was in full swing in Vanderveer street, near Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, last night, when a gasoline lamp exploded, sending flaming liquid over booths and stampeding a hundred dancing couples. In due course the fire would have burned itself out, causing little damage and probably no injury.

But a small boy whose mother had bought several chances on a sailor doll that would have been named Danny had he won it, started a panic. Seeing the fire creep across the top of the doll booth, he began to scream and pedestrians on Bushwick avenue hearing the cry "Save my Danny," and noticing the glow of fire, hurried to a fire alarm box and pulled the hook. At the same moment Mrs. Ella McDermott, of 10 Granite street, dashed to the rescue of the sailor doll and a dozen others. The woman's dress caught fire and in an instant she was hysterical with fright. She started to run into a house, and was thrown on the pavement by Edward Donovan, 23 Granite street, who tried to smother the fire in her dress with his coat. Both he and Mrs. McDermott were burned and had to be treated by an ambulance surgeon.

Because the fire alarm had been received from a box near the church extra apparatus responded. In a few minutes Vanderveer street, dressed up with bunting and flags and lanterns, was cluttered up with three truck companies and as many engines.

Firemen extinguished the flames that were destroying two of the booths and then the party was resumed.

RED LITERATURE SEIZED.

Detectives Confiscate 5,000 Circulars in Raid on Club.

Detective Sergeant James J. Gegan and four other members of the bomb squad raided yesterday the headquarters of the Union Russian Workers on East Tenth street and confiscated 5,000 radical circulars stored in an icebox there. There were about twenty-five Russians present, but no arrests were made.

The raid was the result of reports that radicals have been distributing circulars to workers on the east side blaming "capitalists" for the Wall street bomb explosion. The circulars said "made to order plots against the Government are framed up and placed at the door of the working classes by Government agents." They were signed "The United Communist Party."

WILL OF WM. C. CRICKS CONTESTED BY FATHER

Widow Answers With Request to Administer Estate.

Notice of contest of the will of William Campbell Cricks was filed yesterday in the Surrogate's Court. At the same time Mrs. Clara M. Cricks, widow of the banker, filed application to be appointed temporary administratrix.

In his will Mr. Cricks left his estate in trust, one-third of the income to be paid to his father, Charles C. Cricks of Pittsburgh, and the balance to his widow, Mrs. Clara M. Cricks, for life. Under a prior will, the estate was administered by the testator's widow.
